Admirable Courage.

If a man does a thing bravely and well, even though it be directly at variance with our habits of thought nail action, it is impossible to withhold from blin n certnin sort of respect, says the New York Leilger. He has courage to assert himself, and, say what we will, we all secretly like that quality, even when it tells against us. A person who goes ereepingly and self-depreciatingly through the world like a shy dog in n strange place momently expecting a pursuing stick or stone, will generally get it, but let him "show fight," and he may choose his road free from cowardly interruption. The most courageous wins. Our noral is that this conrage should early have the right direction. How many good mrn are lost to good enterpises through moral timidity. When the time of action comes, they are in fact "deserters." The negative evil they do cannot be estimated.

Near Parsons, Pu., a woman put two tubs of clothes to soak, just outside the kitchen door, and then went into the house for a few minutes. When she came out one of the tubs had disappeared, leaving only a hole in the ground where it had stood. While she was wondering over the matter, the other tub sank out of sight. This made her open her eyes, and when in a moment the family cow followed the procession she became alarmed and ran into the house. A few minutes later, Up. she summoned up conrage to look out been sweethearts, but the girl's parents of the door, and found that a cherry tree in the yard had gone the way of the other things. The woman went to tell the neighbors of the occurrence, and received an explanation that the land was situated over un abandoned calliery, and liable to cave in anywhere. That evening she told her husband they had better move.

Getting on in business depends on systematic study, but not on systematic study of geology or economies or Latin and in very few cases on a knowledge of German even. How often have you heard mildle-nged people say: "You change, that the oil bursting out of the couldn't exepct one as long out of bed of a creek on the farm of S.B. But, snys the Chicago Record, problems in arithmetic, grammar and geography are coming up every day to business, and the man who solves them the quickest gets lato the new field first and reaps the golden harvest. The simplest calculations have led to the greatest business discoveries and surcesses.

The Only Roosler That lias a Tambstone Over His Grave. Maj. Tom Williams owned the only rooster that has been honored in

"While we were camped near Culpeper Court House, in the fall of 1804," he says, la telling the story, "I became acquainted with a family named Dowdy. Just before the hattle of Culpeper I paid a visit to the farm and found the ladies in a panie preparing to flee. They set before me such a seant fare ns they had left, and after I had eaten a hasty luncheon Miss Mary Dowdy called to ane and led the way to the back yard.

"There is the last of our stock of poultry,' sald she, pointing to a little bantam cock that was strutting about the yard. 'I haven't the heart to kill him because he is a pet. If you want him you can take him and do as you like with hlan."

"During the enumaign of 1863 he often sat on my shoulder through the long, weary marches and hurried retreats, and I shared my rations with him. One night we had reached the flank of the enemy's camp by a forced march and lay down to sleep on our arms, expecting to be roused at the break of day for a sudden charge. I had started off with General perched upon my musket barrel, and a sudden change in the order of march had separated us from the wagons, so I placed the rooster on the limb of a sapling above my head while I lay down to snatch a few minentes' sleep preparatory to the surprise planned at daybreak.

"General did not utter a single cluck in protest, although he must have been very hungry from long fasting, lent quietly squatted on the branch while I flung myself on the grass and leaves and was soon fast usleen. I was so weary that I slept profoundly until 1 was suddenly aroused by an unearthly screech in my ear. Raising my head, I took in the whole situation at a glance.

"General had dropped down from his porch and uttered a shrill crow right ln my ear which had awakened me, and as I opened my eyes I saw the llash of guns as our pickets fired, and in an Instant fell back upon us where we lay. The Yankees had turned the tables on us and, discovering our presence, the surprising force became the surprised and in ten minutes there was the most unearthly racket going on in that pine thicket that you can imagine.

"Right and left of my position the boys came out of cover and advanced with yells and cheers, moving cautionsly and firing as they moved. It had become sufficiently light for me to find my few belongings, and I soon recovered my hat and haversack, which I had forgotten to pick up in the hurry of the first surprise, and just at that time I was saluted with a loud crow just above my head, and looking up I saw General perched upon his limb, he having flown back there when the firing began, and with his head held on one side he was sidling along the swaying branch crowing and clucklag as big as If he had taken part in the fight.

"In spite of the banging of the guns and whistling of bullets, General stuck bravely to his perch and never fluttered during the entire engagement. When I told the story in camp that night General was the toast of the evening, and he was treated to all sorts of tidbits from the haversacks of my comrades in recognition of his gallautry on the field of action.

"One morning, however, General played the camp detective in a most alarming manuer, which came near proving disastrous to a fellow soldier of another mess. All foraging had been strictly forbidden and no man was allowed to leave the ranks under the heaviest penalty of milltary discipline. There was a fellow by the name of Jim Nessmith, who occupied a tent not far from that of the cuptain of our company. About four o'clock the order was passed along the lines for us to prepare to march. We had not been allowed to kindle our campfires the night before, so that our breakfast consisted of bits of hard tack and such other scraps of food as had been left in our haversacks.

"General was perched on the limb of a bush near me while I sat munching my hard tack, and all of a sudden he raised himself on his perch and crowed lustily. Of course, no cock in hearing could resist replying to such a challenge, and from within the tent occupied by Jlm Nessmith came the muffled crow of an old rooster. Jim made a grab at the bag and succeeded in choking him off, but the noise had reached the ears of some of the others, and the captain became apprised of the fact that Jim had been foraging. A hasty examination of his tent disclosed the body of the blg rooster choked to death by Jim in his anxlety to put a stop to his untimely crowing.

"Ilm was ordered under arrest pending an investigation, but just about missing. People who jibo at pensions and we moved forward, and hy sunrise ve were fightling, and the unfortunate officer who had ordered Jim to be placed under arrest was borne from the field corpse after the light was over. The affair was forgotten until the stirring scenes that followed.

"Seeing that the end was near, I found in opportunity to send General to the Georgia hy having a tombstone over his rear, and placing him in a cage, started him on the long journey to the home of a nephew in Georgia. He had not been long on the farm before he began to pine and droop, and the family thought that he was disconsulate on account of being separated from his comrades. This might have been all fancy, but he lived only a short time, and when he died my nephew and the boys of the neighborhood gave him a regular military funeral.

"I suppose that his is the only grave of a rooster in Georgia. The tiny stones that mark his last resting place can World. be seen on the old homestead near Dalton to-day. On the headstone is rudely earyed the name 'General,' with the date of his death and the names of some of the most important engagements through which he passed during our comradeship among the battlellelds of off the engagement?" There was a time when in our more northern towns and villages furniture adapted especially for use on the pluzza was unheard of; when even a chair was considered a blot upon the frir surface of the shining floor, and the barren, spotless clemmess of the "front stoop" was a thing to be wondered at. WASHINGTON LETTER.

A $2,000,000 Rathroad Station Planned. A Society Tale of Two Cities Congress' Hard Bargains.

[Special Correspondence.] Washington Is going to have a new railroad station. That doesn't seem very important at first blush to the casual ewspaper remier who lives at some disace from the national capual, but it important mevertheless, quite us imreant from some points of view as the action of a new building by the govarent. If you want proof of that, you hould see the change made in the uset of the city by the new city postlee which the government has put up and which, by the way, they talk of sing as a postoflice department buildog now that it is almost completed. This postoffice building has given a new scence value to historic Pennsylvania avenne

Washington without its public buildings would be a rather time city. Few of its business men have been public spirited enough to put up handsome buildings. There are two buildings of granite, erected by trust companies; a the dry goods store, handsome structures. belonging to the Baltimore Sun and the Washington Post. Then there are some nice hotel buildings, and of course there are beautiful and costly residences almost without number. But these would make a beggarly showing beside the buildings in other large cities, and only the public buildings, the broad, well paved streets and the many parks and reservations save the city from being rather conmonplace,

Of National Importance.

Every addition to the list of fine business baildings, then, is important, and when a $2,000,009 milrond station is suggested the matter becomes of national importance. Why? Because Washington is the nation's city. It belongs in part to all of us, and all of us have an interest in its beauthheathan. It is the city by which many people judge the whole of the United States. Hardly a stranger visits our country who does not stop here for a few days. And it Is the city where every American citizen may come and swell proudly with the thought of his nativity. The reason Washington has not had a fine station before is that congress and the railroads are always at war here.

Congress Drives Hard Bargains. In other citles there are "boolle aldermen" to be bought and mayors to be influenced by business considerations. and many other elements with which the railroad companies have learned how to deal. Here there is only congress, and congress tries always to drive a lmrd bargain. Sometimes congress is cheated woefully. The street railroads of the city have led congress by the nose for many years. But when the steam railroads want anything they have to be very adroit if they are going to get

To Elevate or Depress.

It is the policy of the road to elevate or depress its tracks to avoid the danger of grade crossings. Accidents at grade crossings are expensive, and grade crossings cause embarrassing delays. The trains on the New York-Phlladelphia division of the Pennsylvanla go whisking by ln almost endless succession, the trains between New York and Washington constantly grow in number, and small delays grow more and more importunt. The travel between New York and Washington now is enormous. Even ties.
